Survey Methodology

The 2015 Financial Literacy Survey was conducted online within the United States by Harris Poll on behalf of the NFCC (National Foundation for Credit Counseling) via its QuickQuery omnibus between March 11 and March 13, 2015 among 2,017 adults ages 18+. Figures for age, sex, race/ethnicity, education, region and household income were weighted where necessary to bring them into line with their actual proportions in the population. Propensity score weighting was used to adjust for respondents' propensity to be online. Prior to 2013, this survey was conducted by telephone.

All sample surveys and polls, whether or not they use probability sampling, are subject to multiple sources of error which are most often not possible to quantify or estimate, including sampling error, coverage error, error associated with nonresponse, error associated with question wording and response options, and post-survey weighting and adjustments. Therefore, Harris Poll avoids the words "margin of error" as they are misleading. All that can be calculated are different possible sampling errors with different probabilities for pure, unweighted, random samples with 100% response rates. These are only theoretical because no published polls come close to this ideal.

Respondents for this survey were selected from among those who have agreed to participate in Harris Poll surveys. The data have been weighted to reflect the composition of the adult population. Because the sample is based on those who agreed to participate in the Harris Poll panel, no estimates of theoretical sampling error can be calculated.

Significance Testing

When results from sub-groups of a sample appear in the detailed tabulations, an indicator of statistically significant differences is added to the tables run on our standard demographic banners. Significance testing is done to the 95% confidence level, and the test is performed on percentages as well as mean values. Each sub-sample is assigned a letter. When the percentage of one sub-sample is significantly different from the percentage of another sub-sample, the letter representing one of the two samples appears next to the percentage (or mean) of the other sample.

For instance, the percentage of males answering yes to a particular question may be compared to the percentage of females answering yes to the same question. In the example below, the male sample is assigned the letter B, and the female sample is assigned the letter C. Here, respondents were asked whether a certain business practice is acceptable. 67% of women said that it was -- a proportion significantly greater than the 57% of males who believe that the practice is acceptable. To indicate that women are significantly more likely to find the practice acceptable than are men, the letter B -- the letter assigned to the male sub-sample -- appears next to the "67%" in the female column. Similarly, the 37% of men that find the practice unacceptable is significantly greater than the 29% of women who do so and, therefore, the letter C -- the letter assigned to the female sub-sample -- appears next to the "37%" in the male column.

Key Findings

Budget, Spending, and Savings

In 2015, two in five U.S. adults (40%) – a proportion that has held roughly steady since 2007 – say they have a budget and keep close track of their spending.

Though more than half of adults (56%) say they are now saving the same as last year, the proportion who have non-retirement savings has decreased slightly from 69% in 2013 to 66% in 2014 and 2015. Where they are saving their money varies: 65% report using a savings account, 30% have investments/mutual funds, 29% have a 401k plan, 25% save their money in IRAs, and 9% do so at their home (under the mattress or in a home safe).

When it comes to retirement savings, nearly three in ten U.S. adults (29%) still do not save any portion of their household's annual income for retirement.

In fact, when asked what areas of personal finance are most worrisome, the top responses were: retiring without having enough money set aside (15%), and insufficient "rainy day" savings for an emergency (13%, down from 16% in 2014).

Credit Card Debt

One in three U.S. adults (33%) indicate their household carries credit card debt from month to month, with about one in ten adults (11%) saying they roll over $2,500 or more in credit card debt each month.

In the past 12 months, 16% report they have applied for a new credit card, while 7% have been rejected for a new card and 6% admit they have been late making a credit card payment.

Knowledge of, and Confidence in, Personal Finance

In 2015, about three in five U.S. adults (59%) – roughly the same proportion as the last 2 years (60% 2013, 59% 2014) – give themselves a grade of A or B on their knowledge of personal finance. At the same time, however, three in four adults (75%) agree – and nearly one in four (23%) strongly agree – that they could benefit from advice and answers to everyday financial questions from a professional.

Despite nearly one in four U.S. adults (24%) admitting they do not pay all of their bills on time, more than nine in ten (92%) say they are very or somewhat confident that the last time they made a big financial decision (such as picking a credit card, buying a car, or refinancing their mortgage), they made the right choice.

Almost half (48%) of adults say they are very or somewhat confident that they are saving enough for retirement, while three in ten (30%) reveal they are not at all confident.

Financial Problems and Credit Counseling

If they were having financial problems related to debt, U.S. adults continue to say they would first turn to their friends and family for help (25%).

When asked why they would not reach out to a professional non-profit credit counseling agency for help if they were having financial problems related to debt, roughly one in five adults (22%) say they can resolve their own problems without outside help, while one in four (25%) – or more than 63 million Americans¹ – indicated that they would reach out to a professional non-profit credit counseling agency for help.

Credit Reports and Credit Scores

As in 2013, the majority of adults have not reviewed their credit score (52%, down from 60% in 2014) or their credit report (66%) within the past 12 months – nearly half (49%) reviewed neither, while about one in three (32%) reviewed both. U.S. adults are more likely to have reviewed their credit score but not their credit report (17%) than they are to have reviewed their credit report but not their credit score (3%).

Among those who ordered or received their credit score in the past 12 months...

- More than one in three (35%) did so as part of regularly managing their personal finances.
- 32% say they ordered their credit score out of curiosity.
- Almost one in four (23%) did so because they were considering a major purchase/apartment rental or applying for credit/insurance.

Among those who did not order their credit score in the past 12 months, about one in three (34%) say they didn't know of any reason why they should, while nearly one in ten (8%) say they already had their credit report(s) so they didn't think they needed their credit score (down from 12% in 2014).

Though about half of U.S. adults (51%) say it is important to them to receive a free FICO score from their credit card bank or company, only about one in four (26%) have a credit card that does so every month.

Student Loans

In 2015, 7% of adults would recommend student loans as a way to finance a college education (down from 10% in 2014), while about one in ten (11%) would not.

Nearly one in ten (9%) are currently re-paying student loans (6% their own, 3% their children's). Of these, the majority (76%) say doing so has impacted their personal financial situation in some way. Exactly half (50%) have been unable to put money away for an emergency fund, and nearly two in five are unable to save for retirement (38%). About one in four (26%) struggle to make their monthly student loan payment and 19% struggle to pay their monthly rent/mortgage.

16% of those currently re-paying student loans report they struggle to pay for basic necessities such as food and utilities.

¹ Calculation based on U.S. Census Bureau's 2012 Current Population Survey (CPS), which estimates there are 234.72 million adults ages 18+ residing in the United States:
 $234.72M \times 0.27 = 63.37M$.
